Tilton's Statement--A Sickening Story--Intense Excitement

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—The statement of Theodore Tilton against Beecher is published and has produced intense excitement. In a long letter to the Investigating Committee he gives as his reasons [illegible] for the committee and by Beecher [illegible] In the conclusion [illegible] Henry Ward Beecher began and thereafter continued [illegible] with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton [illegible] and attentions [illegible] the affectionate love of Mrs. Tilton [illegible] after a long moral resistance by her and after repeated assaults by him upon her mind with overwhelming arguments he accomplished [illegible] maintaining with her [illegible] relation called criminal intercourse [illegible] being regarded by her as not criminal or morally wrong, such had been the power of his arguments as a clergyman to satisfy her [illegible] Henry Ward Beecher [illegible] tender [illegible] of a young child [illegible] of criminal [illegible] place between this pastor and [illegible] regarded by her as the [illegible] he was seated by her [illegible] the floor of his library [illegible] looking [illegible] engravings. That Mr. Tilton [illegible] returned to [illegible] the forenoon and on going to the [illegible] bed chamber found the door locked, and [illegible] knocking at the door it was opened [illegible] Mr. Beecher was seen within apparently much confused and exhausted [illegible].

Mrs. Tilton afterward made a plain [illegible] In the spring of 1870 [illegible] Tilton's return [illegible] winter's absence [illegible] evidence of [illegible] a short time [illegible] between her husband and herself [illegible] she went into the country earlier than usual for a summer sojourn. That after an absence of several weeks she voluntarily returned to her home in Brooklyn on the evening of July [illegible] then and there [illegible] promise that he would not [illegible] Beecher [illegible] communicate to him what she was [illegible] made a [illegible] confession to her husband of the criminal facts stated, accompanied with [illegible] from Beecher's arguments and reasonings with her to overcome her strong [illegible] against yielding to his desires and [illegible] that she had committed no wrong to her husband [illegible] marriage vow [illegible] her pastor had repeatedly assured her that she was [illegible] She further stated that he said the commerce with him never proceeded from low or vulgar thoughts [illegible] but always from [illegible] affection and higher religious love. She stated that Mr. Beecher habitually characterized their intimacy [illegible] pain and sorrow [illegible] hidden secret were ever made known.

To this statement succeeds a series of letters by Mrs. Tilton, Mr. Tilton and Beecher. [illegible] her husband are confessions of the [illegible] and charges that she was overpowered by Beecher's [illegible] arguments and reasoning against the immorality of their intercourse.

New wheat will begin to come into the warehouses in two or three weeks.

SPINNER'S GIRLS

THE OLD MAN WOULDN'T ALLOW THEM TO BE TURNED OUT—AND HE DIDN'T

General Spinner the friend of women and the aged watch dog of the Treasury during the late raid on the departments by an economical Congress, not only stood firm, but came off victorious. When the committee sent for him, and very impertinently inquired how many clerks he could spare from his bureau, he responded:

"None sir. I have not one supernumerary. Indeed I have work—feminine work—for ten men for more."

When informed that it was necessary to cut down his force the old gentleman waxed wroth.

"By —— gentlemen," he cried, "I take that to be a vote of censure. I know my business by ——. I have no drones in my hive; therefore if you resolve to cut down my force include me, for the President shall have my resignation."

This bureau, however, did come under the instructions, and four females received legal notice that their services were no longer required by the department. When this fact reached the ears of Old Spin, he called his clerks and [illegible] females before him and said: "Fellows, an attempt by this ——d beggarly mean Congress is being made to turn some of you out. Now, when they turn any one of you fellows out, by —— they turn me out. But I won't go. No, damned if I go a step; nor shall you. The four notified to quit will continue their work. I take the responsibility, and I'll pay 'em out of the conscience fund. It couldn't be put to a better use. Now fellows, damn crowds, go to work."

The men broke out into a loud cheer, and the women burst into tears. Then [illegible] the little miss of about sixty threw her arms hysterically around him and kissed him. At this all rushed at the benevolent old swearer, and he was nearly suffocated, for the thermometer stood at about ninety.

The dear profane, old soldier. Wish we had many of the sort.—[illegible]

COLLEGE LIFE.—While there are evils and temptations connected with American college life, it is our full conviction that a man of ordinary sense and principle is quite as [illegible] in a moral [illegible] college as he would be likely to be in any other place at that time of life. The dissipation among students is very greatly exaggerated, rather than underestimated, in the general public opinion. If there are some peculiar temptations there are also strengthening and refining influences [illegible] far to outweigh them. We believe that the average morality among students in colleges is at least as high, probably higher than among young men of the same age in business or in the trades. And we must protest—if a protest be even necessary—against the extraordinary idea that Yale and Harvard and our other colleges are to be reckoned among the influences that corrupt our public life.—Charleston Union

AN INQUIRING SUBSCRIBER IN DANBURY

A MAN VISITS THE EDITOR TO FIND WHO PRINTED [illegible]

[illegible] One eye was covered with a [illegible] handkerchief and one arm was in a sling. His [illegible] with a fixed purpose in view.

"I wish to see," said he, "the man that puts things into this paper."

We informed him that several of us contributed to it.

"Well, I want to see the man which cribs things out of the other papers. The fellow who writes mostly the [illegible] you understand."

We [illegible] glittering [illegible] into our exchanges [illegible] of half a dozen [illegible] of his front teeth.

"Just so," [illegible]. "I don't know much about this business, but I want to see the man who printed that little piece about pouring water down a drunken man's spine of his back and making him instantly sober. If you please, I want to see that man. I would like to talk with him."

Then he leaned his stick against our desk and [illegible] as though he was weighing it. After studying the stick a minute, he added in a much milder tone:

"Mister, I came here to see that editor. I want to see him bad."

We told him that particular man was not in.

"Just so. I presume so. They told me [illegible] that the man I wanted to see wouldn't be anywhere. I'll wait for him. I live up north, and I've walked seven miles to converse with that man. I guess I'll sit here and wait."

He sat down by the door and reflectively pounded the floor with his stick, but [illegible] wouldn't allow him to keep still.

"I suppose none of you didn't ever pour much cold water down any drunken man's back to make him instantly sober, perhaps."

None of us in the office had ever tried the experiment.

"Just so. I thought just as like as not you hadn't. Well, Mister, I have. I tried it yesterday, and I have come seven miles on foot to see the man that printed that piece. It wan't much of a piece, I don't think, but I want to see the man that printed it just a few minutes. You see, John Smith, he lives next door to our house. When I'm home and he gets [illegible] how come you so every little period. Now, when he's sober he's all right, if you keep out of his way, but when he's drunk he goes home and breaks dishes and tips over the stove and throws the hardware around and makes it inconvenient for his wife, and sometimes he gets his gun and goes out calling on his neighbors and it ain't very pleasant.

"Not that I want to say anything about Smith, but me and my wife don't think he ought to do so. He came home drunk yesterday and broke all the kitchen windows out of his house and followed his wife around with the carving-knife talking about her liver, and after a while he lay down by my fence and went to sleep. I had been reading that little piece, it wan't much of a piece, and I thought if I could pour the cold water down his spine on his back, and make him sober, it would be more comfortable for his wife and a square thing all around. So I poured a bucket of spring water down John Smith's spine of his back."

"Well," said we, as our visitor paused, "did it make him sober?" Our visitor took a firmer hold of the stick and replied with increased emotion:

"Just so. I suppose it did make him sober as a judge, in less time than you could say Jack Robinson; but, Mister, it made him mad. It made him the maddest man I ever see; and Mister, John Smith is a bigger man than me, and stouter. He is a good deal stouter. Bless me! I never knew he was so stout till yesterday, and he's handy with his fists too. I should suppose he's the handiest man with his fists I ever saw."

"Then [illegible] you did he [illegible]," we asked innocently.

"Just so. Exactly. I suppose he went for me about the best he knew, but I don't hold no grudge against John Smith. I suppose he ain't a good man to hold a grudge against. I want to see the man who printed that piece. I want to see him bad. I feel as though it would soothe me to see that man. I want to show him how a drunken man acts when you pour water down the spine of his back. That's what I come for."

Our visitor who had poured water down the spine of a drunken man's back remained until about 6 P. M., and then went up street to find the man that printed that little piece. The man he is looking for started for Alaska last evening for a summer vacation and will not be back before September 1878.—Danbury News

THE FOURTH IN KENTUCKY.—This is the way the Louisville Courier Journal editorially ushered in the glorious Fourth: This is the Fourth of July—it is not the 17th of March. Neither is it the 1st of May, nor Christmas. St. Patrick was not born on the Fourth of July. Queen Victoria was not crowned on the Fourth of July. No Thanksgiving has been appointed for the Fourth of July, and history has failed to record one single hanging or horse race. And yet the Fourth of July is honored as the day on which General Jackson signed the Declaration of Independence, is the day on which Dr. Franklin won the battle of New Orleans, as the day the eagle-bird of liberty flopped her wings and exclaimed, in the classic words of Jones' fighter, "I am the howling [illegible] of the mountains." Shall we not then honor the day and celebrate it? No. Let there not a fire cracker the less or a stripe erased or a star obscured. Nail to the mast that holy flag, set every threadbare sail, and leave her to the God of storms, the lightning and the gale.

MATRIMONY OR PURGATORY.—A priest the other day who was catechising a confirmation class in the South of Ireland asked the question:

"What is the sacrament of matrimony?"

A little girl at the head of the class answered, "'Tis a state of torment into which souls enter to prepare them for another and better world."

"Bang," said the priest, "the answer for purgatory."

"Put her down," says the curate, "put her down to the foot of the class."

"Leave her alone," says the priest, "for anything you or I know to the contrary she may be perfectly right."

SACRAMENTO, July 22.—Certificate of increase of capital stock of the Sierra Nevada Silver Mining Co. from $4,000,000 to $10,000,000 [illegible] shares, $100 each, was filed in the office of the Secretary of State to-day.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, July 22.—The W[illegible] completed its lines to this place to-day, having everything in successful operation at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The advent of the electric evangelist was hailed with a generous outburst of joy by the citizens, the hoisting of flags, firing of anvils, music by the San Luis Obispo cornet band and a short but eloquent address by the Hon. A. [illegible].

A WARNING.—The people of the North can not afford to see any portion of the people of the South, white or black, oppressed for opinion's sake, and if the Republicans fail to find a remedy for such outrages as have become common in the South, the Democrats will be called forth to redress and adjust the difficulty.—Philadelphia Press (Rep.)

THE NEW YORK ASSISTANT TREASURER.—Assistant Treasurer Hillhouse, of New York, arrived here this morning and filed in the Treasury his bond for the new term of office which commences to-morrow.—Wash. Dep. July 10.

GEN. BUTLER'S INTENTIONS

Since his return from Washington General Butler has been very quiet and has not yet announced his intentions. The State awaits his decision on the Governorship with some concern, though it is generally anticipated that he will not be a candidate, mainly because of the [illegible] though it is possible he [illegible] the Republicans he will meet and that he has lost ground. One of his friends says that it will take "a great deal of glue" to prevent his running, but most of his shrewdest friends advise him not to be a candidate. It is said that he would probably go to Europe for a time [illegible] not been asserted in some circles that he cannot be re-elected to Congress. If he runs for Governor it will in the very nature of things put the House question and all else on a back seat, and he will be the only issue [illegible] opened the campaign at [illegible] on the Fourth of July, but the public have as yet no symptoms of candidacy on his part. It seems to be suspected that Judge Hoar's withdrawal from the field will lead Gen. Butler to temporarily bid farewell to the Essex district, and run from his Lowell home. The latter district contains many of his strongest friends, and it is said that he can and [illegible] be elected there. There are other candidates who will have to be considered. Dr. J. C. Ayer was the candidate when [illegible] ran, but he never stood much of any chance of nomination or election, and certainly his prospects do not improve with age.—Lynn Cor. N. Y. Times.

COMMENTS BY THE TIMES

An account in some detail of the situation of political affairs in Massachusetts will be found in our columns this morning. It will be seen that the State is as much prepared to [illegible] of apprehension over the doings or omissions of the Essex "statesman" as ever. If that worthy representative of the State of Webster and Sumner should conclude to seek the Republican nomination for Governor, he will probably furnish the only political news of perceptible liveliness for the next two months. If he does not run for Governor it remains to be seen whether he will continue to honor the Bay State by retaining his seat in Congress. [illegible] something very curious in the spectacle of a great State [illegible] by a politician so wholly opposed to all its traditions and all its best impulses as is Butler to those of Massachusetts. [illegible] how ever our institutions bring representation [illegible] which produces [illegible] Butler and Sanborn must have some elements corresponding to those in its population. But who would select it from reading Massachusetts journals?

THE STORY OF FIVE ACES

It is a story of five aces, says an exchange. It was at the Hot Springs at Arkansas where only gentlemen and ladies—not ordinary men and women go. Ephraim Taggart of Mississippi and Colonel Charles Gordon of Galveston, Texas, were there, and they were engaged in a pleasant game of cards. Mr. Taggart lost all his money, and then with two aces in his hands, put up his watch against $200 and called. The Colonel, with much suavity, and a like amount of presence of mind, showed three aces and immediately raked in the watch. Then for some remarkable reason, Ephraim Taggart got angry and said there had been cheating. He never in his life before knew that a single pack or deck of cards had five aces. Colonel Gordon had no time to argue the matter, however. He could simply see the aces on him, [illegible] that he had been insulted by the Mississippian. Most men, it strikes us, would have stopped to reflect as to how the extra ace came in the miserable pack. Colonel Gordon merely remarked that he had been insulted and drawing a knife stabbed Ephraim Taggart to the heart, quietly remarking as he wiped the blood from his knife that he guessed that would settle it. It was a most disgraceful argument from beginning to end on the part of Colonel Gordon. That excellent man could see nothing [illegible] but the astounding fact that his honor had been insulted and could reach no conclusion but the one at the point of his knife—sometimes [illegible] mentioned as murder. The [illegible] society at the Hot Springs quite unreasonably conceived it a duty to [illegible] call on Colonel Gordon at a sort of court martial. There the Colonel stopped to consider the matter in several of its bearings and ingeniously explained. There were five aces in the pack—that nobody could deny. But had there not been similar [illegible]? How should he know that his opponent in the game held the extra ace? He was not a clairvoyant and he did not pretend to any extra wisdom as to cards. He was a gentleman and he simply knew that his honor had been at stake. He had played a friendly game with Ephraim Taggart and that person had charged him with cheating. What more could a gentleman do? His hearers must reflect that murder was his only refuge from a blasted character. The argument we need hardly remark had its appropriate effect. The court-martial gently censured Colonel Gordon for having been overhasty in defending his honor, and then let him go, first, however, we do not doubt, inviting him to a supper, and the next day the body of the too thoughtless and unhappy Ephraim Taggart was gently laid in the most convenient graveyard. And we shall not visit the Hot Springs of Arkansas this year. The weather is too warm and the journey too long and dusty.

HOW IT IS DONE

THE NEW [illegible] GAME WITH WHICH THE [illegible] BAVARIAN DELUDES THE HONEST MINER

Into the smoking car, near Winnemucca, one time stumbled a drunken miner. Any one who has ever seen the blue shirt, muddy boots, unkempt hair and unshorn beard of the honest miner would at once recognize the man as coming direct from the gold region. He makes a swaggering attempt at walking, but catching his foot against something stumbles heavily against a German passenger. As he falls, his purse slides from his pocket and the man is perfectly deluged with a shower of gold. The Teuton makes no attempt at resenting the insult, but helps pick up the coins and assists the miner to a seat beside him. He pays the utmost attention to his new found friend. The miner several times attempted to go out on the platform, but the man quickly restrained him. "Mine Gott, mine friend," he would say, "you just out dere, you falls right way off," and casting a longing glance at the precious contents of the purse he would put his arm around the miner and carry him back to his seat. At the Humboldt house they took dinner, the German inducing the drunken man to agree to settle therefor. Prior to eating they walked up to the bar to take a drink. The miner placed a five dollar gold piece on the counter in payment. The other watched his opportunity, slipped the gold piece into his pocket, and placed a half dollar in its stead. The drunken man took no notice of the transaction. Indeed, he was so far gone that he could not sit down without assistance from the accommodating Bavarian. After supper [illegible] was laid on the counter from which it [illegible] disappeared in the same pocket and silver half dollars took its place. The drunken fellow seemed blissfully oblivious of the trade or robbery to which he was being made the victim. In the car he went to sleep.

The German made three several attempts to take away the plethoric purse which projected provokingly from the miner's inner coat pocket. The pressure of the man's folded arms accidentally prevented. After enjoying a good nap the fellow took out three cards, and in a slow bungling manner shuffled them about in his lap. A finely dressed stranger, passing by, inquired the name of the game and the rule by which it is governed. "Three card ante," was the reply. "Ante (hic) all the time, this card (hic) wins, these two chaps lose." Dealing away to an imaginary opponent he turned up a card and fairly shouted with glee to find that it was the right one.

The stranger offered to take a hand and try it $20 worth. "Well no (hic), got plenty of money that I don't want no more." After considerable parley, however, he relented, and $20 was put on a side. The stranger won and pocketed the cash. The Teuton was frantic. Evidently the miner was going to lose all his treasure. "Mein Gott! mein friend," he whispered, "you playsh mit dose bad fellows, and dey shall robs you like anydinks," and putting his finger along side his nose and winking knowingly he added: "I much better we has von leetle game all by ourselves." Thus urged the miner declined further bets. "Oh, my dear [illegible]!" Twenty minutes later he and the German were sitting flat on the floor at the end of the car having "a leetle game." The cards were spread and the latter to make assurance doubly sure picked up the card while the miner's head was turned, saw that it was the right one, and then went down into his pockets for all the money he could raise. The miner gave the cards one more clumsy shuffle. The man watched the winning one and laid his money on it. Too greedy to be content with winning the miner's cash little by little he raked and scraped his pockets for the last dime. Prominent among the coins were the two five-dollar pieces which he had stolen from the counter. The card was turned. It was the wrong one. A sweep of the miner's hand swept in the ducats. "Mine goot friend, hold on. It wash all a mistake," he repeated; "you shoost give me back my monish and I says nothing all about it." The miner, however, was suddenly sobered, and leaving the other moaning and groaning like a dying man, he joined the stranger at the further end of the car. They were the famous Brown brothers, two of the most accomplished gamblers on the road.—Denver Tribune.

NAKED JUSTICE ON A GATE POST

Our old friend Judge Tom Farrar of Lake Providence, says the New Orleans Picayune, who is known throughout the State as a lawyer and jurist of eminent abilities and a gentleman of most lovable character, tells at his own expense and with the keenest gusto, a story which we think too good to lose. It appears that some years ago, while riding through one of the prettiest districts of North Louisiana, he came, about sundown, to a creek which was so deep as to necessitate a swimming feat. The Judge being a man of vigorous and invincible determination, no sooner realized this emergency than he promptly dismounted, undressed himself with great dispatch, and attired only in his high hat and a pair of spectacles, bestrode his gallant colt and urged him to the venture.

After a desperate struggle the other side was gained and the Judge again dismounting this time with a profound sigh of relief was about to resume his integuments when the horse, prompted by some diabolical spirit, started from his side and slowly trotted down the road.

Of course the Judge had no recourse but to trot after him, and thereupon there ensued one of the most remarkable and picturesque chases ever known in history or tradition. The horse appeared to have no motive save that of keeping a certain distance ahead of the Judge and of finding some comfortable barnyard where he might refresh himself after such gigantic efforts. The Judge, whatever may have been his ambitions, confined himself to the effort of keeping the truant beast in sight. It must have been a cheerful and invigorating experience to see the Judge trotting briskly along that smooth and sandy road, his venerable plug hat pulled over his eyes, and his spectacles bobbing up and down upon his nose. The chase was long and the moisture of great exertion would gather on his brow, and then, when he reached around for his handkerchief, alas! it was not there. All of which had the effect of impressing the Judge with his very peculiar and unfortunate situation, and imparting renewed play and lightness to his legs.

So the two bowled pleasantly along, preserving a steady relative distance until just as the setting sun was reddening the distant hills and touching the Judge's manly form with gold, the horse whisked suddenly into a gate and bolted with eager haste toward a stable dimly visible in the distance.

The farmhouse sat in a grove of trees whose shadows made a great darkness around it, and from this grove as the Judge was scampering furiously after his horse and wardrobe there issued sundry yellow dogs surly of mien and shaggy of appearance. The Judge felt that it would be utterly impossible, under these circumstances, to assume that majesty of aspect and fearlessness of gaze which is currently believed to be the correct thing with dogs, and so seeing a friendly gate post near at hand, he gave one wild bound and reached its summit just as the leanest and fiercest of the dogs snapped viciously at his legs.

When the uproar had subsided and the Judge, realizing the absurdity of the situation, had regained his customary frame of mind, a female voice was heard calling from the house, "Who's there?"

"A fellow creature in distress, madam."

"Where are you?"

"On the gate post," said the Judge, beginning to enjoy the joke.

"What can I do for you?"

It was too much. The Judge's old humor and quizzical love of merriment came over him. "Call off these dogs and bring me all the fig leaves on the place."

A HORSE THAT KNOWS SOMETHING.—On Sunday last, while two horses belonging to Mr. William E. [illegible] were feeding in pasture, one of them fell into a ditch, partly filled with water, at the foot of Chester avenue, and his mate, seeing the accident, stopped not to wonder, but started on a run for his master's house, a distance some two or three hundred yards away, whinnying all the time. Arriving at the house he stopped only a moment, still keeping up the whinnying, and then started back to see how his companion fared. He made four or five trips to and from the house before stopping, and not then till his master appeared, though some dozen persons were trying to help the fallen beast. When Mr. [illegible] arrived upon the spot he ran to the stable and entered his stall. The horse was taken from the ditch uninjured, but had it not been for the conduct of his mate he would have found a watery grave, as in falling one of his forefeet got through the halter round his neck, and as he fell in head first, kept his head under water.—Worcester (Mass.) Press.

AN OLD GOOSE.—The Danville (Va.) [illegible] has this: Mr. Humphrey Dix of this county gives us the following history of a gander that lived to be 50 years of age. The goose was hatched in the vicinity of Danville. Mr. Dix's mother gave it to his youngest sister, Miss Tompkins, when she was married. He was carried to the plantation belonging to Mr. Sam Harriston, near Sauro Town Mountain, in Stokes county, was brought back twenty years ago to the neighborhood in which he first saw the light. Mr. Humphrey Dix knew the remarkable old fowl himself 50 years. At one period of his extreme old age he lost his eyesight and was fed from the hand of his kind owner during all that time. But at length he came to his sight and lived ten years thereafter. He became very decrepit in his old age and stood around from day to day picking a few sprigs of grass without going far from the door. As old and experienced as he was he at last died from imprudence—drinking lye from a trough in the yard.

PROFESSIONAL HONOR VINDICATED BY FISTS.—A Chicago paper of the 14th inst. says two doctors in Warsaw, Indiana, had a hard fist fight yesterday. It resulted from joking about a recent supposed case of hydrophobia, which one of them had been attending, but which turned out to be a case of a drunken fit. Both gentlemen are highly respected and the matter causes much talk.

TOO CRUEL.—Schuyler Colfax would seem to be in a beatific state of mind. In a recent Fourth of July oration he declared that in politics nowadays men are elevated to a position only to have mud thrown at them, but he believed that there is still left the assurance that right will prevail and be done them at the open grave. This is a beautiful sentiment.—N. Y. Herald

THE TERRITORIES

Cheyenne is smitten with dryness and the trees are dying for want of water.

Dakota is a paradise, for we read that with a total valuation of [illegible] 2,047 81 the board of Equalization has just levied a tax of one mill for the ensuing year for territorial purposes.

Delinquent subscribers to the Olympia Railroad Union, both to stock and labor, are requested to pay immediately to the treasurer or collecting agent, as the money is absolutely necessary.

The truant wife of Robert Archibald of Georgetown, Colorado, eloped the other day with a fair-haired chap named Bob, leaving the disconsolate husband to feed, clothe and spank half a dozen youngsters.

The flag carried by the veterans in Golden on the Fourth was the same that was carried through the war at the head of the First Regiment of Maine volunteers. The flag was brought to Colorado by Capt. A. J. Turner.

The Excelsior Coal Company of Rock Springs has received the contract to furnish General Parry, Chief Quartermaster of the Department of the Platte, with 8,000 tons of coal to be delivered on the cars at Rock Springs. Contract price $2 50 per ton.

The name of "Post of Beaver," a military post in Utah Territory, has been changed by orders of Lieutenant General Sheridan, and approved by the War Department, to Fort Cameron, in honor of the late Colonel of the Seventy-ninth Highlanders, who was killed on the 21st of July 1861 at the first battle of Bull Run.

The New York Herald doesn't want to see the people of the East outvoted by representatives of pine forests, prairie stretches and Rocky mountains, and therefore rejoices because Colorado didn't get into the Union. It talks about coyote suffrage and buffalo representation. Some of those Eastern scribblers can make incredible donkeys of themselves.

A letter from the Attorney General of the United States to Marshal Kearney, of Washington Territory, [illegible] that an appropriation of $7,271 was made by Congress at its last session, pursuant to his recommendation, to make such improvements at the penitentiary as are most needed to make said institution available. It is expected that orders will soon be received by the Marshal for its expenditure, after which the prisoners are to be removed from their present places of confinement to the penitentiary, much to their benefit and safety and the satisfaction of the people.

The News of Denver City, says no grander object is met with in the mountains about that place than the snow plant. It is an inhabitant only of the higher Rockies, being rarely found below an altitude of 4,000 feet, and its glorious crimson spike of flowers may be seen early in May forcing itself through the snows which at that period cling about the sides of our pine forests. The portion of the plant which is visible above the soil is a bright rosy crimson in color, and presents the very strongest contrast to the dark green of the pines and the shimmer of the snow. Its root is succulent, thick, and abundantly free of moisture, attaching itself to the roots of other plants, principally to the species of the pine family. Hence it is among those curious members of the vegetable world which are known to botanists as parasites, and is consequently entirely incapable of cultivation.

OREGON

A Salem man has a single blackberry vine on which is now a bushel of berries.

Henry Webster of Salem, Oregon, passed Corinne bound west, on the 18th inst.

No marriage license has been issued by the Clerk of Marion county for ten days past.

In Yamhill, Washington, Marion, Linn, Lane and Benton counties are fields of grain being harvested.

The Turners' exhibition at Salem last Tuesday evening was a most agreeable success to all taking part and all in attendance.

Three hundred and twenty acres of the Gov. Gaines' original donation claim, six miles south of Salem, were sold to an immigrant the other day for the sum of $6,350.

An ingenious young school ma'am over in Polk, has invented an effectual process to subdue refractory urchins. She stands them on their heads, and pours water down their trouser-legs.

Two nice young men altercated at a lantern show at the Howell prairie school house in Marion county the other night, and now one has a black eye and the other carries a bandage on his nasal organ.

Mrs. Frances Whitlock, a young lady residing four miles northeast of Silverton, in Marion county, received a sunstroke on the 9th inst., and did not recover consciousness till 10 o'clock next day. She is yet ill from the effects of the stroke.

The former residence of Samuel Park in North Salem was burned on last [illegible] night. It was a one story and a half frame building, valued at perhaps $600 or $700. There was no one living in it, and the fire was probably the work of an incendiary.

It is stated that the great tragedy—the murder of Canby and the Peace Commissioners, and Jack's murderous deeds—will soon be played by the Portland Amateur Troupe. It promises to be one of the best dramas ever performed on the Portland stage. Now who are the members of this amateur company? We ask our cotemporaries for light.

A couple of Salem Siwashes are looking for a certain storekeeper. He gave them a can of oysters with instructions how to cook it. The vessel was placed over their camp fire without the precaution of ventilation, and after a while there was a fearful explosion, and almost immediately a pair of scalded aboriginals were seen heading toward the reservation.

An exchange says the great herds of cattle feeding upon the plains and mountains of Eastern Oregon have destroyed the nutritive properties of the bunch grass, and to save them from starvation their owners are compelled to drive them long distances in search of pasture. From the Dalles to the Walla Walla valley the vacant land has been eaten off, and it is thought that within a very few years more stock raisers will have to take up their line of march for the interior of the country in search of pasturage.

MINNESOTA PORK.—Those farmers who sold their hogs last winter, for what was then a high price, expecting to buy pork for their own subsistence in July and August at a loss to the packers, are fooled, so far as July prices are concerned. For the last two weeks pork has been steadily advancing, and to-day it cannot be laid down in any town in this State short of $21 per barrel, which is about 50 per cent advance on the price of a few months ago. Pork packers are the monopolists this year, not the railroads.—St. Paul Press

THE CONGRESS OF 1876.—The Congressmen to be elected during the coming fall will be the members of the Congress that will be in session during the period of the hundredth anniversary of our independence. It ought to be such a body as will make us proud of the fruits of our country's freedom. It is not too soon to mention this matter.—Cincinnati Commercial (Ind.)

THURSDAY MORNING JULY [illegible] 1874

THE BULLETIN'S EVASIONS

The Bulletin makes a feeble attempt to reply to the charges and specifications in regard to the management of the Oregon railways, but having experienced a change of heart on the subject of personalities it has really but little to say, though it exhibits no lack of words. It attempts to make two points, and leaves its case worse off than it was before. It denies nothing that we have specifically asserted; [it] says in a general and meaningless way that we have found fault with the conduct of Mr. Ben Holladay unjustly. [illegible] It won't do. We have said nothing by innuendo nor contented ourselves with glittering generalities, but have been specific and pointed. Nothing but specific and pointed denials on the part of the railway President, making the proof necessary, will meet the case. We challenge him so to meet it.

But to the two points attempted to be made in the Bulletin. To our averment that Mr. Ben Holladay obtained the money in Europe on the entire land grant with the understanding that the entire road should be built to the California line, the Bulletin replies that the California end of the grant never belonged to the Oregon & California Company, and therefore Holladay had nothing to do with it. This is an evasion, and intended to mislead. Holladay's grant extended to the northern boundary of California. If it did not, why did he mortgage that extent of the grant? Nearly 175 miles of this Oregon division is untouched. The "California end" that belongs to the other company is in the State of California, and notwithstanding the statement of the Bulletin to the contrary we have the most direct and reliable information that that part of the work will be pushed forward to the point of junction at any time when the Oregon end will meet it, and would have been so finished long ago had it not been for the failure of the Oregon section. The plain truth is that the want of a line of railway through to San Francisco is due to mismanagement on the Oregon part of it.

The next point and the only other one sought to be made by the Bulletin, is that the land grant was not given to Oregon, but the railway company, and that consequently its being squandered is not a matter of which the people at large have any right to complain. It is scarcely worth while to answer this piece of cheek. Does Mr. Ben Holladay intend to insist that the magnificent grant made by Congress and from the proceeds of which every foot of the 200 miles of road has been built was simply a gift of the public domain to enrich his "corporation" and was no benefit to the people of this, the most beautiful State contemplated by Congress when it said the vast area of public lands covered by this grant should be withdrawn from the settlers and appropriated to the building of a railway to California? What supreme arrogance does this man exhibit! Let the people of Oregon remember the answer they have thus received when they have ventured to remonstrate against the wasteful use of the fund donated by Congress out of the common storehouse to aid them in developing the resources of their adopted country.

NEHALEM PRECINCT.

Our correspondent at Nehalem is, we think, partly right and partly wrong. The mistake of the Clerk whereby the wrong place of voting was specified in the election notice, was probably such an error as made the election irregular if judged by the strict and technical requirement of the statute, and if so the defect was not cured by posting a corrected notice for a shorter period than that provided by law. But there is little doubt that in a contest before a court, votes polled at either of these places would, in the absence of any circumstances of unfairness, be held to be valid, polls having been opened at both places. Nor was it necessary that there should be printed tickets. Tickets written on plain white paper are the same in law as if printed. If there was nothing unfair in the ballot nor in the count at either of the places where these technically irregular votes were cast, the votes of both places should have been counted.

As to the allusions to the candidates on the Independent county ticket of Columbia county, we desire to say we are sure our correspondent has but slight acquaintance with the gentlemen occupying the principal positions on the ticket, or he would not have written as he has concerning them. We have long enjoyed the personal acquaintance of some of these gentlemen, and they are as honorable and high-minded men as are to be found in Columbia county or in the State. We sincerely hope and believe our friends in Columbia county will all unite before the expiration of the official term of the gentlemen elected, that it was the fair thing to count all votes that were fairly polled, and that the election of the Independent county ticket was a very fortunate result of the election.

The Bulletin says we have assailed the old County Board personally. This is not true. We have said the old County Board among the [illegible] last acts before its demise, and after the people had voted it out of existence, paid the wages of sixty men illegally appointed as Deputy Sheriffs, and the people's [illegible] were not deputies, and the fact was known to the [illegible] of the Board before they paid the bills. If it is not a legitimate public matter for newspaper discussion when sixty men are employed by the ring Sheriff to assist him to re-election and their wages paid out of the people's treasury by the ring Board, then we confess ourselves utterly unable to understand what is a legitimate subject of such discussion. If this is objectionable [illegible] newspapers may as well be [illegible] no service to the people. Isn't there danger that the zeal of a new convert in the cause of dignified journalism is leading the Bulletin to overshoot the mark?

Gov. Shepherd, the individual who "[illegible] the Washington tax-payers to the tune of $21,000,000, is out in a letter to the editor of the N. Y. Times. He says: "I am worth less to-day [illegible] I shall have been by giving the time [illegible]" [illegible]

[illegible] make when he started in. He doesn't like the independent press. We infer from this emphatic observation. In this day when a premium is offered for sneaks and thieves in public life it is refreshing to know a journalist able and willing to do justice, and rise above the clamor and howl of a licentious mob. He is [illegible] though. He spends his leisure in contemplating his shoe-latchets [illegible] and palsy the [illegible] hand of [illegible].

On proposition of Mr. Ben Holladay in Tuesday's OREGONIAN, touching the matter of filling up the columns of this paper with certain mighty spicy reading, we [illegible] to announce, declined by that gentleman. After cogitating over it during the day he came to the conclusion that biographies of living men are not exactly the sort of literature to fill the columns of a newspaper [illegible] that personalities in journalism are a thing to be avoided henceforth. We commend the good judgment of the gentleman, though we must confess [illegible] the thoroughness and promptness of a change of heart so radical in character and so suddenly experienced, and which will require the breaking up of long established habits. Our readers may consider themselves fortunate or unfortunate in the indefinite postponement of promised tidbits. We have neither joy nor sorrow to express.

The statement of Theodore Tilton, which comprises a large part of the telegraphic dispatches in this morning's paper, is enough to make the heart sick. Had not the matter taken such shape that nothing material to the [illegible] involved can be suppressed with propriety, we would gladly exclude this horrible record from our columns. But there is only one course open now, and that course is to give the world all that bears directly upon the unparalleled scandal. It is to be hoped the last installment will soon be in hand, so the public may be satisfied, the disgusted may be relieved from further contemplation of the revolting thing, and the great wound which the Christian religion everywhere has received may begin to heal.

There was an error in the report of Congressman Nesmith's serenade speech as it appeared in yesterday's OREGONIAN. Mr. Nesmith was reported as saying that in his endeavor to have the Indian service turned over to the War Department he had the support of General Grant, who testified though reluctantly before the military committee. He said Sherman, not Grant. It will be readily seen that the mistake is one that might lead to serious misapprehension if allowed to go without correction.

The new board of District Commissioners have begun the work of retrenchment in earnest apparently. They have decided to greatly reduce the expense of advertising, have directed the sale of horses, carts, and harness belonging to the District Government, except two or three teams absolutely necessary. In addition to this they have provided that all contracts hereafter made shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder after due public notice. This is putting the knife where it will do the most good.

A good many people still believe in Lo. Among these are the Peace Commissioners. Thus a Washington dispatch to the New York Times says of the Indian difficulties south of the Union Pacific: "The Indian authorities do not believe that the Kiowas can be induced to join them [the Comanches, Arrapahoes and Cheyennes] for they think that Santanta will keep his word." But Santanta didn't keep his word. Perhaps he will next time.

We received yesterday a letter from Weston in Umatilla county, which must have been some time on the road, as it was an account of the Fourth of July celebration at that place. It is too old for news. Some of the facts it recites were published in the OREGONIAN nearly or quite two weeks ago.

The S. F. Call says there are various rumors afloat concerning the Nevada Senatorship. One has it that Senator Jones is making effort to re-elect Stewart. Sharon's name is pushed with energy. DeLong and Sutro are considered out of the contest.

Agnes Strickland, the historical authoress, died in London on the 13th inst., age [illegible].

DISSOLVING VIEWS IN POLITICS.

The San Francisco Bulletin thus discourses of political parties as at present situated:

The old parties are like the contending shapes in Dante's Inferno. The man gradually grows into a serpent and the serpent into a man, and so on in endless metamorphoses. It would puzzle the most subtle casuist often to determine where Republicanism ends and modern Democracy begins. They are frequently so blended that one cannot be distinguished from the other. It is fortunate that the political artist always takes the precaution to inscribe beneath the painting "this is a horse," else it would be difficult to tell what manner of animal it was. Even sectionalism in this political chaos fails to indicate dividing lines. Missouri Democracy seems to be about the same thing as Maine Republicanism. On the other hand, Connecticut Republicanism is good western Democracy. As a consequence of this breaking down of all lines of demarcation in the eager pursuit of the plunder, the people are beginning to form their judgment of parties rather upon their tendencies than their professions. They are manifesting a disposition everywhere to compare the platform with the record and draw their own conclusions. But not only is there confusion as to old issues, but a deliberate ignoring of vital questions. There is not one of the party conventions that has yet defined itself upon the monopoly question except that of Iowa, and in that it was only in an equivocal manner. The Iowa Republicans declared that they were in favor of the laws regulating fares and freights until they were declared unconstitutional! That plank simply meant that they considered it inexpedient at this time to take up an attitude of rebellion against the laws of the State.

THE DANA LIBEL SUIT.—A Washington [illegible] of July 11th says:

Opinions differ widely as to the probable result of the action of the grand jury regarding Mr. Dana. Many of those who should be well advised maintain that he will certainly be indicted; others are of a contrary opinion. It is known that the indictment as it is drawn is not based upon general attacks of the Sun newspaper on the late District government, but is based upon special charges made by that newspaper against Mr. Shepherd personally. One of them, it is understood, is the recent charge that Shepherd has an interest in the Columbia Bank Note Company in this city, and [illegible] scandalous and corrupt [illegible] practices in the interest of that concern.

THE GOODRICH MURDER TRIAL IN COURT.—New York, July 18.—Kate Stoddard, alias Lizzie King, on trial on charge of being the murderer of Charles Goodrich in Brooklyn more than a year ago, was in court to-day. Pending the argument of a motion made by the Prosecuting Attorney for the appointment of a commission to examine into her sanity, and while her counsel were reading affidavits, she became excited, attempted to snatch the affidavits from their hands, and denounced them roundly. The services of several court officers were required to put her back in her seat. Further hearing of the argument was then adjourned.

MRS. WILLIAMS' HEALTH.—A Washington special of July [illegible] to the Chicago Inter-Ocean says: Mrs. Williams, wife of the Attorney General, is still in poor health, [illegible]

LETTER FROM NEHALEM.

To the Editor of THE OREGONIAN:

We would beg leave to explain to that worthy citizen of Columbia county who takes so much interest in showing up one of the tricks, &c. We don't propose to open a blackguard siege in your paper, nor to follow anyone. We will give a few facts in regard to that rival voting place in the Nehalem. [illegible] we will confine ourselves to facts. Through a clerical error our County Clerk designated the wrong voting place in this precinct. The error was not corrected till eleven days before election, when an additional notice was posted correcting the voting place. Many of us in the valley live from ten to fifteen miles from the voting place. To [illegible] and return [illegible] at the risk of losing our ballot was foolish. Every citizen in the valley was informed of our intention to organize at our post office. On the day of election we met, having [illegible] and this is as many as was present at the lawful and usual place of voting. [We] passed resolutions setting forth our position and appealing to the justice of the Board of Canvassers. One of our friends was kind enough to have the County Clerk send us the [illegible] poll book, and these as well as all other matters were conducted in accordance with the law. We had tickets, and as all but judges went about their own business as soon as voting business was attended to, all three tickets were placed on a table and the voter took his choice. The Independent ticket of this county was not voted because it did not contain any State ticket [illegible]; therefore we repudiated it as a swindle. We voted generally the Independent State ticket, showing that we are entirely heedless of the instructions of the Oracle, [illegible] there are a larger number taken in the valley than in the rest of the precinct. The only way we obtained the State Independent ticket was to make a copy from the poll books and post it on the wall for the use of voters. We voted generally for the old county Sheriff, Clerk and Treasurer, because we believed they were both honest and competent, as shown by their administration the past two years. For the other offices, we voted for those we believed most honest. We are Independent to a man and will vote for those principles when represented by honest men, acting in an open handed manner. Can any one explain why the State ticket was repudiated as described?

Most respectfully, NEHALEMITE.

RUM MAKES A GEM, &c.—This is a cold, heartless, indifferent, unappreciative world—that's a fact. Here is W. A. C., the accomplished and versatile editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, who tells us in a plaint entitled "editorial correspondence" of his experiences and disappointments. W. A. C. was engaged to exhibit the proud American eagle to the people of some hamlet up the country on the Fourth. After riding all night in a country wagon through the bottomless abysses of mud of a timber country, fighting mosquitoes on every hand to the death, and having nothing to drink but whisky straight without ice—there are no fancy drinks in those regions—and being scared by the approaching grasshoppers, [illegible] W. A. C. at last reached his destination, and tired, hungry, faint and thirsty, fired off his Fourth of July piece with the following result, as related by him [illegible] an affecting composition:

It was a very good audience to talk to—very good indeed. About a third were recent Scandinavian arrivals, and couldn't understand a word of English, and them I held spell bound! The others wandered a good deal and were uneasy and restless and seemed unable to fix their attention.—St. Paul Press.

A HEAVY ROBBERY BY FOOT PADS.—La Crosse, Wis., July 13.—Near Austin, Minn., this morning, a cattle drover named Woods was decoyed into the woods by two men claiming to be farmers and that they had stock for sale in a pasture near by. After getting Woods into the country they presented revolvers and demanded his money or his life. They got away with $6,000. The officers at Austin and a large crowd of citizens were soon in pursuit. The last report says they had not been captured yet.

THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 23 1874

THE NEW ENGINE HOUSE. — [illegible] specifications for the new engine house for Multnomah Company No 2 have just been completed and can be seen at the office of Mr William [illegible] architect. This building will be constructed on the site of the old wooden one which so narrowly escaped total destruction by [illegible]. It will be constructed of brick of ample dimensions and when completed will present a handsome architectural appearance. The total length of this engine house will be 78 feet by 35 feet in width and two stories high. The first story will be occupied with the standing room where the engine will be kept. This room will be [illegible] feet long by [illegible] feet in width. At the middle of the [illegible] will be placed [illegible]. In the rear of the large room will be placed a closet, laboratory and a [illegible] apartment 11 x 14 feet. This story is 16 feet in the clear. The second story is to be 14 feet in the clear. It will be divided off into a large meeting room 24x55 feet, a [illegible] room 24x11 feet, a committee room 14x14 feet, hall stairways, etc. Every [illegible] and we presume the contract will shortly be let. The intention is to push the work forward with all speed [illegible] the season is already far advanced.

PAID THE COSTS. — Yesterday morning in the Police Court the case of the State vs. Barker and Phillips charged with beating one Jones during a drunken row which occurred on Tuesday evening, was called up [illegible] Barker was [illegible] in default of bonds and Phillips was released [illegible] deposited $10 for his appearance. Both defendants appeared in court when the case came up, but Jones failed to put in an appearance at the hour appointed. He was called at the door, but that manly [illegible] on which every god had set his seal to give the world assurance of a man, etc., now slightly dressed in mourning was no where visible. There being no one to appear against the defendants the Court was compelled to dismiss the complaint made in behalf of the State and release Barker and Phillips, [illegible] Jones and holding the defendants to answer the charge of disorderly conduct. Subsequently, however, Jones put in an appearance, [illegible] satisfaction and paid all costs, whereupon the Court dismissed the city charges and released the defendants.

FINE STOCK. — Four fine blooded stallions purchased by Hon J W Nesmith in Maine during his [illegible] arrived here on the steamer [illegible]. Soon after the steamer reached the wharf the animals were taken to the City Stables where they remained until evening when Mr Nesmith started for his farm in Polk county. During the day the stable was visited by a large number of persons attracted thither by these fine horses. The stock consists of the following animals: A large black stallion [illegible] the Knox and Messenger stock, 16½ hands high and weighing 1300 — a fine animal; a dark bay thoroughbred stallion about 16 hands high, from the old Lexington stock and during his career on the turf has come out winner of twelve races. This animal is probably the fleetest horse in the State. He is called Delaware. The other two stallions are three year olds of the old Knox and Messenger stock, weighing about 1,000 pounds each and in their build and action clearly resemble their sire.

CHARLES [illegible] — Any one who asserts that Charles [illegible] does not possess an eye for beauty and an ear for melody is certainly at fault. Charles has been arraigned in Police Court on every petty charge known to the law from simple drunk to abusive language, not excluding the larceny of cold lunch, boots, shoes, coats, hats and woollen shirts, and now he comes gallantly to the front on a charge of stealing two beautiful canary birds. Such a crying shame that a soul so full of appreciation of all that is beautiful and harmonious in nature should become a prey to vulgar hunger or be subjected to the indignity of incarceration in the city jail for thus manifesting his strong affection for canary meat. And yet stump orators do tell us that we live in a land of liberty! Perish the groveling thought! Charles will interview the Police Judge this morning to the tune of say about twenty days.

HOW IS THIS, MAC? — The following from the evening paper will render some explanation necessary at the hands of our Mac: Mr J. M. McCoy of the police force in this city, who was supposed to be a staunch member of the society of "Old Bachelors," has been courting up in the sly, leaving his [illegible] to suppose that he was off on duty [illegible] yesterday, upon his return from the Sound the aforesaid detective laid off to Salem and there took a partner in business in the person of a young lady of pleasing address and manners. Although taxed with duplicity toward his fellows, he stoutly denies the imputation and asserts he is yet one of them, but the boys know better and upon their [illegible] we beg leave to congratulate the happy pair and wish them a long life of unalloyed happiness.

FROM EASTERN OREGON. — Mr J. D. Lenon of La Fayette arrived in Portland last evening from the Eastern country, whither he went some time since to visit his relatives residing in that section. He gives information that the country is at present greatly in need of rain and suffering much from the prevailing drouth. The Fall sown crops he states will yield a fair average, but spring [illegible] is a total failure for want of rain and were being cut when Mr Lenon left that section, for hay. The yield of cereals from that portion of the country will be quite limited the present season.

AN ANTI-TEMPERANCE EQUINE. — The guests of the Clarendon and those having business in that neighborhood were treated to a novel sight yesterday. It seems that the horse attached to Spaulding Bros' meat wagon became unmanageable just below the hotel and got away. He struck a bee line for Ross' saloon and managed to get his head inside of an open window, endeavoring all the time to make further headway. In this he was unsuccessful and the driver took him away, and ere this was penned he had his drink — not spirits, malt however.

AGROUND. — The British ship O[illegible] which arrived at Astoria on Monday evening, left there on Tuesday morning in tow for this place. She was passed by the [illegible] Tuesday afternoon beating up the river. We learn that the ship ran aground yesterday in attempting to enter the mouth of the Willamette. Being light and unmanageable she could not be handled [illegible] and was drifted out of the channel and got stuck on the sand. It is probable that the [illegible] will swing clear the first tide and arrive here this morning.

MAN DROWNED. — A man named Ned Fitzgerald, a logger from Oak Point, got aboard the Willamette Chief at the above place on Tuesday and went to Astoria. During the evening he in company with a friend made their way to the boat and in attempting to get aboard Fitzgerald fell into the river. Before assistance could be rendered the man was drowned. The body was recovered about an hour later.

WEATHER REPORT. — From the records of the U.S. Signal Station of Observation, Portland, Oregon, July 22 1874:

SUMMERING. — Among the several who are able to spare the time as well as the money [illegible] Clotchie [illegible] E. Wasserman [illegible] Esq., [illegible] and family [illegible]

TEMPERANCE MEETINGS. — The National Temperance Prayer Meeting will be held at the Taylor street Church [illegible]. The public generally are invited. The W[illegible] Temperance [illegible] regular [illegible] meeting in the [illegible] of the [illegible] street church this [illegible] at 8 o'clock.

STRANGE ARRIVALS. — [illegible]

FESTIVAL AND LUNCH. — The entertainment in the way of a social festival given by the ladies of the Taylor street M. E. Church last evening was quite successful and a large amount of ice cream, coffee, cakes, cold chicken, etc., was consumed, but they had more than enough left and again kindly remembered the printers by sending a basket full of edibles to our office, which were much relished. To-day from noon till [illegible] P M the ladies will furnish lunch to all who will call at the basement of the church. Be sure to call between 12 and 1 [illegible] and satisfy your hunger.

DANGEROUS OBSTRUCTION. — A little below the foot of Stark street a snag can be seen protruding above the surface of the river at low tide. By some means this snag became fast, and thus forms a dangerous obstruction to navigation. When the tide is at the height of the snag it is several feet below the surface and [illegible]. Vessels are liable to run [illegible] it should be torn out by [illegible].

ONE MORE. — On Tuesday evening Sheriff Gray of Grant county arrived in this city having in custody an insane person named James Paine, who had been examined by the proper authorities and adjudged insane. He was committed to the asylum at once. Paine's [illegible] and unable [illegible].

AT ASTORIA. — The [illegible] Dramatic Troupe gave a performance consisting of the actress Ly Daylight, singing and dancing by the company, at Astoria this evening. The house was well filled on the occasion [illegible] night.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Fly your beans.

Two steamers [illegible].

The Chinese [illegible] need renovation.

The Stephens made a good passage to this port.

Lunch at the Taylor street church from 12 to 1 o'clock to-day.

The frame of the old stable at the corner of Second and Stark streets has disappeared.

The Probate and Judicial branch of the County Court will convene on Saturday at 10 o'clock A M.

A large quantity of wooden pipes brought from Olympia on the City [illegible] was [illegible] on the westside train yesterday afternoon.

Donald McKay, Chief of the Warm Spring Indians, has returned from the East and will soon depart for Portland and his loved aborigines.

THE STAGE.

Mr[illegible] Phelps and Company are now [illegible].

In speaking of M'lle Marie Gorgan, who was in Portland two years ago, the [illegible] says: This very pretty and accomplished danseuse, who has for some years been a resident of San Francisco, left for New York by steamer yesterday. She made her last appearance on the occasion of the benefit of M Descombes at the California Theater on Sunday evening, when she made a great hit in the Gitana [illegible].

SHIPPING NOTES.

The [illegible] arrived at Port Townsend on the 17th inst. from Portland.

The schooner [illegible], which was here last fall, cleared for Honolulu on the 1[illegible] inst. from San Francisco.

PERSONAL.

Among the passengers arriving in San Francisco July 19 were Mrs [illegible] M Stratton and Henry Webster, Salem, Oregon; I B Wing[illegible]ard, Olympia, W. T., and General J P C Shanks, Representative in Congress from Indiana.

A B heading Ax, used by Robespierre in the French Revolution is to be seen in the Museum.

A QUEER CUSTOM. — German newspapers often publish notices of births and deaths in a manner which seems strange to American readers. Engagements are also published. In the second sheet for instance of every issue of the Cologne Gazette these announcements of engagements may be found throughout the whole year. When the engagements are broken off this is also at times published by one or both of the parties concerned. But it is seldom that an announcement such as the following is found, which is quoted in the Cologne Gazette of the 17th of June from the Dresdener Journal: "With respect to the announcement by which I at the end of last November gave notice of my being engaged to the Dowager Princess [illegible] von Kotzebue, I am now obliged to state that this relationship has at her desire and to my great regret been broken off because she did not find in my [illegible] [illegible] which [illegible].

SPECULATION AND STINGINESS. — Gov. Davis was up [illegible] yesterday begging and pleading with the [illegible] to appropriate a little money from their overflowing county treasury for the relief of the destitute settlers on the frontier. His solicitations were backed by Hon [illegible] Pillsbury and others, who went so far as to give their personal guarantee that the [illegible] would refund the money from the State Treasury if they would loan it for the time being. The County Commissioners were [illegible] considering whether under all the circumstances it would be quite prudent to let the money go on these terms. At last advices they rather thought not. The scrupulous caution which they exercise in the matter is in marked contrast to the [illegible] generosity of the Ramsey County Commissioners. — St. Paul Press, July 11.

A REPUBLICAN VIEW. — General Howard appears to have been, in the first place, incompetent for the business; in the next place, indifferent to law or regulations, or accountability, so that to this day the bulk of his disbursements have to be received on trust. In the next place he seems to have thought that the benevolence of his mission would cover up adventures, themes and [illegible]. The worst feature in the case is that the honor of the Army has sustained such looseness [illegible] and [illegible] of accountability in the army itself. — [illegible]

The Granges of [illegible] county, Minn., are heavy and [illegible] that they will not contribute from the Grange fund for the relief of the starving farmers, but advise him to take the necessary funds from the State Treasury. [illegible] It is not likely that he will adopt it. He must be content to look for contributions, or perhaps call the Legislature together in extra session to provide means for alleviating the distress. — Chicago Times.

Count [illegible], a Saxon noble, was [illegible] and changed his mind. The lady's father wished to challenge him but was sick, so he was challenged by the lady's uncle. [illegible] [illegible] both fired twice and missed and then shook hands, and so the second shots evidently thought this a honorable waste of powder and satisfied. This is something like a duel.

A CASE OF ASIATIC CHOLERA. — Louisville, Ky., July 11 1874. — Patrick [illegible] died in this city yesterday of what the attendant physician says was Asiatic Cholera. After a sickness of eight hours he died in the same house in which the epidemic of 1873 broke out. This is the first case reported in this section this summer.

A [illegible] RAILROAD. — The Iowa central railroad is said to [illegible] parties in interest. — St. Paul Paper, July 14.

LOST, CROSSING THE BAR

A PLEASURE PARTY WASHED FROM THEIR YACHT INTO THE SEA. FIVE [illegible] OF THEM [illegible] DROWNED.

The terrible [illegible] which occurred [illegible] last night in the whaler [illegible] Uffley Sharpless of Philadelphia and family, consisting of his wife, Mrs Esther Sharpless, Mrs Caroline Sharpless and Master Alfred Sharpless, together with Mrs Pettie, Miss Anna Roberts, daughter of Elisha Roberts, of the Chalfont House, Kit Clarke of Forepaugh's Menagerie, and Capt Frank Steelman left the wharf in a yacht at 3:30 P.M. [illegible] When about [illegible] and was not returning the yacht was struck by a heavy sea capsizing her and pitching the whole party into the water. Mr Sharpless threw one arm round his wife and with the other grasped the boom to which he clung. Mr Clarke, who had fortunately secured hold of a rope attached to the yacht, and who was doing his utmost to help the others, caught Miss Pettie, but [illegible] and tried to save her, but getting [illegible] drove them [illegible] water discovered that he had already [illegible] and knowing that he could do nothing for her [illegible] Mrs Battle [illegible] daughter [illegible] Mr Sharpless and [illegible] The Captain had a position in one end of the yacht and was trying to save Miss Sharpless. They were discovered from the [illegible] and the lifecrew quickly put out to their assistance. Just as they came near enough to find the unfortunate party at [illegible] Mr Sharpless lost hold and he and his wife were swept away. Those still alive, Mr [illegible], Mr Clarke and Capt Steelman were rescued [illegible] where they were [illegible] The body of Miss Sharpless was washed ashore on Brigantine beach and was recovered about 3 P.M. The yacht [illegible] drifted on Brigantine beach and will probably be broken up [illegible] morning. None of the other bodies have been recovered. Paul Boynton, the well known swimmer, has been engaged to watch for the bodies to night. — [illegible] Philadelphia [illegible]

Coughs and Colds, are often overlooked. A continuance for any length of time causes irritation of the Lungs or some chronic Throat Disease. [illegible] TIMELY.

Henry V. — People say that our Ladies have [illegible] styles of head dresses. What would they think if they could have seen a belle of King Henry's reign? A quaint writer says: "The end of the work into which the hair had been gathered, at the sides of the face became extended into large squares on each cheek, and the veil which was thrown over them gave them the appearance of a Horned Head Dress." The horn shape was imparted by means of two wire horns around which the [illegible] was curled. Surely our ladies do not think of [illegible], but to be [illegible] by the [illegible] render their [illegible] beautiful and luxuriant.

OLD PIZEN

A REMINISCENCE OF THE EARLY MINING LIFE OF [illegible] NEVADA

[illegible] Virginia City (Nev) Enterprise

In the early days in my years [illegible] Jones [illegible] mining on the Stanislaus river [illegible] It was a small camp, containing [illegible] habitations all told. The [illegible] structure in the camp was a boarding house owned by a Mr Joggles, a Missourian. This Joggles was [illegible] proclivities. He [illegible] a vicious looking old bulldog [illegible] which [illegible] was covered with [illegible] were always [illegible] friendly mood. This dog he was ready to back against any [illegible] on the river for a fight. He also had two or three game roosters of whose prowess he was boastful. But his especial glory and pride was his fighting horse, a large [illegible] exceedingly vicious broncho, which he called "Old Pizen." And "pizen" he was to all four footed creatures in that region; indeed was so [illegible] that [illegible] was almost poison to himself.

This fierce and unsocial beast had taken possession of a large grassy flat about half a mile above the camp, and would allow no other animal to come upon what he viewed as his private domain, nor for the matter of that [illegible] anywhere near the camp. At Cherokee Flat the old [illegible] was monarch of all he surveyed. He had whipped and run off every animal that had ever been brought to the camp. The miners several times swore vengeance against Old Pizen, and would have shot him but that they liked Joggles, and the soul of Joggles delighted in Old Pizen; therefore they let him live.

Not content with conquering intruders the old broncho would chase them for miles, running them clear out of the country. The moment he saw a strange animal he laid back his ears and went for him, using both heels and teeth.

About all this Joggles didn't care a cent. When told of one of the exploits of the animal he would laugh in spite of himself and would swear that Old Pizen was the "biggest [illegible] hoss on the Stanislaus," and that he would "back him agin any critter that ever wore har." He would tell how a big American horse chased away by Old Pizen was found 40 miles distant with his tail gnawed off to a mere stump. When he thought of the comical appearance the maimed horse must have presented with his [illegible] stump of tail, Joggles would laugh till tears ran down his cheeks.

The fame of the fighting horse extended for miles around the camp. Prospectors passing that way with pack animals were warned against him. "Beware of the fighting horse!" was the word through all that country.

Sonora, the county seat of Tuolumne county, was the source whence the miners of Cherokee Flat drew their supplies of "grub" and other necessaries. The town was 15 or 20 miles distant, and the miners would occasionally go up there, order what was wanted, and have it packed down to their camps.

One day [illegible] Jones and one of his partners went up to Sonora to procure supplies for their company, known as the "Buckeye." [illegible] remained over night in town, intending to return the next day. In the morning soon after they arose they heard a terrible commotion in a livery stable just across the street from their hotel. Running over to ascertain the cause, they found that a big Spanish jackass had [illegible] his way into the stable through a rear door, and was on the war path among the horses. He had cleaned out several stalls almost at a dash and then reached that occupied by a powerful black stallion. Here he found work to do. As Jones and partner entered, a furious battle was raging, the horse using his heels and the jack his teeth. The horse being confined by a strong halter, the jack had rather the best of it. After tearing and mangling the flanks of the horse frightfully, the furious jack, unmindful of the blows the stablemen were raining upon his back, suddenly crowded himself forward into the stall and seized the horse by the under lip. Here he held on like a bulldog, the poor horse quivering in every muscle and moaning in agony.

One of the proprietors of the stable drew his revolver and was about to shoot the savage ass, when his owner arrived and a fierce wrangle ensued. The owner of the fighting jack drew his pistol, and for a time it looked as though there was likely to be "a man for breakfast."

Finally, however, the owner of the jack succeeded in getting him away from the trembling and mangled horse, and drove him out of the stable.

It now occurred to Mr Jones that here was an animal that would make Old Pizen sick at the stomach. A word of this thought to his partner, and they agreed if possible to secure the fighting jackass. Following the owner of the jack, they soon came to an understanding with him. They were told that the jack was a good pack animal, and as quiet as a lamb when no horses were about. When he came where there were horses his whole nature changed, and he went for them with the fury of a tiger. The jack being an unusually powerful animal, the owner asked $75 for him. Jones and partner agreed to run him a trip on trial, and gave the owner $75, which he was to keep in case the jack was not returned within a certain time.

Having secured the fighting jack, Jones and partner packed him and started home in high feather. As soon as he was out of town the jack became as docile and sleepy as any other old "burro" that ever trotted a trail. Before getting home the beast became absolutely lazy, and Jones & Co began to fear that off his own dunghill their jack was of no account as a fighter.

It was about sundown when the men reached Cherokee Flat and drove up to the door of the "Buckeye Company's cabin." Their partners had quit working and come up from the bar. They were getting supper, but, for a time, discontinued the work of frying bacon and baking slap-jacks to come out and ask "J P" and companion how they came by the big donkey.

In as few words as possible Jones made them acquainted with the character of the beast. When he had finished his account of the scene at the livery stable, every man of the Buckeye Company was firmly convinced that the big jack could "walk the log" of Old Nick himself, but mum was the word. No hint of the fighting qualities of the animal was to go out of the cabin.

Presently Joggles, whose boarding house was just across the street, espied the jackass, and came over to where he was being unpacked. A smile struggled about the corners of his mouth as he came.

Walking up to the beast and eyeing him from stem to stern for a time, Joggles said:

"Purty good chunk of a jackass. Bin buying him?"

"Well," said Jones, "I don't know. We have him on trial. We may buy him. He's big and strong and seems nice and quiet—may be a little lazy."

Joggles, who seemed to be calculating about how many mouthfuls he would make for Old Pizen, at last said:

"Well, yes, he seems rather quiet."

Having unpacked the jack, one of the boys gave him a slap with a strap, as much as to say, "You are now at liberty, old fellow; go off and enjoy yourself as you please!"

"What!" cried Joggles, opening his eyes in amazement, "you ain't going to turn that jack loose here? The first thing you know he'll poke off up to the flat where Old Pizen is. Then he'd be a dead jack as sure as you live! Why, he wouldn't make a mouthful for Old Pizen!"

"Well, I don't know," said Jones; "the jack is a very quiet old fellow, and I guess Old Pizen won't think him worth bothering with. Besides, the chances are that he will stay and [illegible] about camp—won't find his way up to the flat at all."

"Well, just as you please," said Joggles, pretending some concern, "but you know what Old Pizen is!"

"Yes, I know," said Jones, "but Pizen is getting old. I guess he don't thirst for the fray as in his younger days. I shouldn't wonder, now, if the old jack were to whip him in case they should get together," added Jones, laughing.

"What!" cried Joggles, turning red, "that old jackass whip Pizen? Not much! I'll bet you $100—yes, I'll bet you $200—he can't whip one side of him! Come now!"

"The trouble is," said Jones, "that the jack is in a strange place. He might not fight. However, he looks as though there might be some fight in him. If the two ever do get together, I rather think he'll make it warm for the broncho."

"You do, eh?" said Joggles. "Well, I do! Here! here, now—back up your opinion, or take water. Here's $200! I'm willin' to just let the animals alone—let them find their way to each other—and I bet this $200 that when your jackass no alive! Come now, Pixley, here, shall hold the stakes. See me, see me! come down! Two hundred goes that Pizen whips!"

Thus urged, [illegible] covered the money in Pixley's hand, and once it was done a better pleased man than Joggles was never seen on the Stanislaus. He thought he had the dead est thing in the world.

[illegible] Joggles to tell all [illegible] the camp what a [illegible] thing he had on Jones [illegible] winding up with [illegible] know [illegible] Pizen [illegible]

All the evening the old jack remained browsing about the camp, and the next morning was still there—standing with half shut eyes, head down, and lazily switching his stumpy tail.

[illegible] looked at the old jack. Standing on his [illegible] the miners of the camp passed on their way down to their claims on the river, [illegible] them would like to back that ferocious beast against Old Pizen for another $200.

At last all the men of the camp were down on the river at work. At about 10 o'clock in the morning one of the men of the Buckeye Company happened to go from the bar up on the bank of the river for something. A moment after he came, gleefully he sang out to those below: "The impatient Joggles is going to bring on the game. There he is—no ton be one long. I see him startin' the old jack along up the valley toward the flat. He's on the sly, and is getting rather keen to see the fight."

Watching [illegible] he was seen in the edge of the timber [illegible] to move up a streak of open ground that led to the flat between two groves of pines. Presently he came back and seated himself on his porch, getting up once in a while and stretching his neck to see if the jack was going in the right direction. He was dying to have the animals get together.

At last a man who had climbed upon the bank reported that the jack was not to be seen, and that he had no doubt gone over the ridge into the flat.

All was now excitement among the men, and two or three of them were constantly on the river bank listening for sounds of the fray. Presently they cried out that the battle had begun. All hands hastened to the top of the high steep bank, whence was to be had a fair view of the open ground leading up to the ridge beyond which lay the flat where roamed the fighting horse. Although half a mile distant, terrible squealing and braying could be distinctly heard—cries of rage and pain from the contending animals. A great cloud of red dust could be seen rising from the ridge. This cloud, that told of the battle, moved to and fro, sometimes appearing to approach quite near to the crest of the ridge, then again to recede. All this time there was heard the most fearful squealing and braying imaginable—sometimes very distinctly, again more faintly, as the varying breeze wafted the sounds, or as the scenes of the battle shifted.

Looking toward camp, Joggles was seen jumping up and down, and running frantically about, evidently intensely excited. Soon he was observed to get a ladder and mount upon the roof of his porch, and thence to climb to the top of his house, vainly stretching his neck to obtain a view of the fight.

Now the cloud of dust was seen to rapidly approach the crest of the ridge, and soon it came whirling over it. Then were seen two dense clouds of dust, both rolling rapidly in the direction of the camp. Wild snorts and hoarse brays were heard. Swiftly the red clouds rolled on, and soon in the foremost the form of an animal could be seen. A puff of wind showed this to be the Broncho—Old Pizen. At the distance of three or four hundred yards behind rolled a rapidly-following cloud, as we have sometimes seen two small whirlwinds in playful mood. What was in this last cloud could not be seen, but the "Buckeye boys" felt that their jackass was there.

Down into the camp charged the terrible broncho, snorting with fear at every jump, and occasionally half turning his head in order to see if the terrible jack was still in pursuit. As the frantic horse tore through the camp with nostrils distended, mane flying in the wind, and tail sticking out straight behind, Joggles was heard shouting wildly from the roof of his house: "Whoa, Pizen! whoa, Pizen!" But just at that moment there was no "whoa" in Old Pizen. Down through the little town he came—making directly for the bar, as though in search of human assistance.

Straight on he came till he reached the bank of the river, here fully twenty feet in perpendicular height. At the brink he halted, hesitating to take the fearful leap, and, with eyes starting from their sockets, took one long despairing look behind. There came the venomous and indomitable jackass, never breaking his steady, rolling gallop.

With outstretched neck, ears laid back and tail whipping up and down with each bound, on he came. The old broncho erected his tail, took one more glance at his approaching foe, gave a snort of terror and leaped from the bank down into the river. Luckily for him, the water was deep, and rising to the surface he swam to the opposite shore and came out all right on a bar that put out from the bank on that side. Here he halted, evidently feeling himself safe.

The jack thundered on and came near plunging into the river before aware of its presence. But by bracing all aback till his haunches almost touched the ground he came to a halt. But it was only for a moment. Seeing the old broncho on the other shore, he stretched out his neck and giving a diabolical "yee haw," unhesitatingly plunged into the river and diligently struck out for the horse.

This reckless and energetic persistence on the part of the enemy was evidently unexpected to the broncho. He gazed for a few moments at the jack, as he rose to the surface and began swimming, [illegible] as though thunderstruck at the fearful energy displayed by the little beast—then tossing his tail aloft and giving a tremendous snort, he dashed away down the river at the top of his speed.

The jack was soon over the narrow stream. On landing he snuffed the ground a moment, then raising his head and catching a glimpse of the fleeing horse, away he plunged in keen pursuit.

A bend in the river soon hid the animals from view. As the men were still standing gazing after them, a great crash was heard. More than one voice then cried: "The gulch! the gulch! By heaven! they have both gone into Devil's Gulch!"

What was referred to as "Devil's Gulch" was a narrow ravine with rocky perpendicular walls, which put into the river about fifty yards below the bend.

"Something fell into the gulch, sure!" cried the man, "and it must have been either the horse or jack, or both."

All now started for a crossing some distance up the river, in order to go down the shore and see what had happened. Joggles, who had before this descended from the roof of his house, now came puffing and blowing across lots, and joined the party. [illegible] teen or twenty men in all, as they came from several claims.

"D——n a jackass, anyhow!" was all that Joggles said as he came up with the crowd. As all knew his feelings, no one said a word.

"D——n a jackass!" he several times muttered as they moved down the river after having crossed over.

Rounding the bend, they came in full view of the gulch. There upon its rocky brink stood the jack. With outstretched neck he was gazing intently into the chasm below. His ears were lopped forward, as though to shade his eyes and give him a clearer view of what lay at the bottom of the gulch. The sound of approaching footsteps at length attracted his attention. Turning his head and seeing the party drawing near, he moved back from the brink of the precipice, gave his tail a flourish and uttered a series of triumphant "yee haws."

Looking down into the chasm, the men beheld lying at the bottom—motionless in death—Old Pizen, the fighting horse of the Stanislaus. His head was doubled under him—his neck was broken.

When he came up out of the gulch after having ascertained this fact, Joggles was deadly pale. Drawing and cocking his six-shooter, he advanced toward the party and said: "John P. Jones, you knowed what that jackass was. Don't speak! Let no man here speak a word."

With this he turned suddenly to where the jack stood with head down, moping sleepily, and sent a bullet through his brain. The beast fell without a moan, when Joggles advanced and deliberately emptied the contents of his revolver into its carcass. He then seized it by the ears, dragged it to the brink of the precipice and tumbled it down upon the body of the old broncho, saying:

"As you are the only thing that ever whipped him, d——n me, you shall lie and rot with old Pizen—Old Pizen, the Fitin Hoss of the Stanislaus."

Wheat in Liverpool, by mail advices from San Francisco [illegible] for average California and [illegible]

[illegible] encouragement [illegible] relative [illegible] has been noticed. Plenty of money, generally [illegible] in the present prospects for a season [illegible]

[illegible] capital is abundant, seeking investment [illegible] in find a way to even this remote part of the commercial world.

At New York [illegible] exchange had improved and prices [illegible] Money [illegible] expected to be still easier, as during this month [illegible] dividends will be disbursed by [illegible] corporations. A good deal of the money now loaned out on call will have to be called in, [illegible] capital that has been lying idle will be put into active employment; but the vast sum of [illegible] to be disbursed in July will in part be seeking reinvestment in some dividend paying securities, which will tend to strengthen prices.

The remarkable strengthening of the Bank of France continues to be the most noticeable feature in European finance. Comparing the last statement to December [illegible] with that for the [illegible] of June [illegible], we find that the circulation has been diminished by the sum of [illegible] francs, and that it is now [illegible] hundred [illegible] francs. During the same time the specie on hand has increased more than [illegible] francs, a gain of more than fifty per cent, and now reaches very nearly eleven hundred and fifty millions of francs. At the close of 1873 the proportion of specie to circulation was but twenty six per cent; it is now forty five per cent, and has almost reached the point where resumption of specie payments can take place without the slightest danger to the bank. The enormous contraction that has been carried on through the past year has injured nobody, and France has demonstrated her power to take gold from London in spite of the Bank of England [illegible]

The Wheat Crop

Information from the several counties in the State leads us to believe that in all the country west of the Cascade mountains the wheat yield will be larger by at least 20 or 25 per cent in the aggregate [illegible] but that Eastern Oregon will fall short of that of last year by quite a [illegible] owing to [illegible] and frosts late in the spring and extreme heat and drouth in the latter part of June and so far in July. The best data at present obtainable justify an estimate of the amount that will be produced in Oregon and that part of Washington Territory which markets its surplus through this point, at 1,300,000 bushels over and above the amount required for home consumption. This we believe now will not fall far above or below the exports for the approaching harvest year, should the market be active and transportation be secured. In Linn, Marion, Lane and Benton counties the yield will probably show a greater per cent increase than in either Polk, Yamhill or Washington, these being the principal wheat growing counties in the valley. In Eastern Oregon, Wasco is expected to show a small increase, Umatilla and Union a falling off of 20 to 25 per cent. Baker county, Oregon, and Walla Walla county, W T, a still greater loss. Of course all estimates at this early period are at best only approximate, and when the threshing begins the valley fields may turn out more or less than even the best judges now believe. That the falling off east of the mountains will be experienced there is but little doubt, or our information is wrong. But in the State at large it is safe to estimate the surplus 1,000,000 or 1,500,000 bushels above the home requirements and for seed.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—The market is barren of transactions for immediate delivery. If we except a few small lots which occasionally are taken by millers at $1 [illegible] per cental, exporters would probably not pay over $1 [illegible] and are not receiving [illegible] contracts for the new crop are held [illegible]

FLOUR—The supply of standard brands [illegible] is limited, and most now [illegible] worked off in the local trade. Prices therefore keep well up, being [illegible] country brands can be had in abundance at $1 [illegible]

OATS—While the current demand [illegible] quotations are [illegible] cents per bushel for choice, and [illegible] for inferior. We predict a decline in the course of ten days or two weeks at most.

BARLEY—There is a good demand for choice lots for brewing purposes and such readily command $1 50 per 100 lbs including sacks. Common feed quotable at $1 40@1 45.

FEED—[illegible] demand outside of home [illegible] is now felt and prices are weak at $[illegible] for bran, $17 [illegible] for shorts, and $[illegible] for chops middlings.

HAY—The new crop is coming in largely, supplying the market at reduced rates. Dealers pay [illegible] for loose timothy from wagons and [illegible] for baled.

POTATOES—The new crop is now at hand in larger lots and prices are reduced to [illegible] per bushel according to quality. In some parts of Washington Territory, where large quantities are generally produced, we are informed that the yield this year will be greatly reduced by reason of some disease the exact nature of which is unknown, though many persons call it the blight.

ONIONS—The market is firm at [illegible] for choice lots of yellow [illegible]

DRIED FRUIT—[illegible] apples the inquiry is hardly so brisk as at our last report [illegible] plums are not changed.

BACON—The market in this commodity is in a somewhat anomalous condition. The supply is [illegible] holders of sides [illegible] firm in their rates, which [illegible] while hams and shoulders are both plenty and cheap [illegible] Our figures [illegible] We include sides, hams and shoulders all under the general name as being the [illegible] understood.

LARD—The receipts are [illegible]

BUTTER—The shipment [illegible] steamer [illegible] market of quite a large [illegible]

CHEESE—[illegible]

EGGS—[illegible]

CHICKENS—There is [illegible]
